Personal digital cameras are permitted for many of our collections; certain limitations apply and are described on the personal camera use form. All other reproductions will be made by Oxford College Library staff.
3. Reproduction of library materials will be made by the Oxford College Library for use only in research and private study by the applicant (except as noted below). Copies supplied may not be reproduced in full or in part. The applicant, without prior written consent of MARBL, may not place them at other repositories.
4. Certain limitations on duplication apply: Only one copy will be made of any portion of a copyrighted work (including manuscripts material). Sheet music and unpublished musical scores still under copyright may not be duplicated without permission from the copyright holder. Published books still under copyright may not be duplicated in their entirety. Duplication for private research use of copyrighted audio-visual materials requires prior permission from the copyright holder. Certain Oxford College Library collections contain reproductions of original materials held by other institutions. These items may not be reproduced without permission from the owner of the original material.
5. Excerpts from copyrighted materials may not be quoted by the applicant in his or her own work or elsewhere without permission of the copyright holder, except as allowed under the fair use guidelines of the copyright law (Title 17, USC). Reproduction of complete unpublished or copyrighted published works (whether in an article, book, film, website, etc.,) requires the permission the copyright holder and the Coordinator for Research Services. The applicant is responsible for obtaining this permission prior to publication. Applicant understands that certain uses may be subject to additional restrictions.
6. Proper acknowledgement shall be given for all materials used. In citing manuscript and archives materials located in this Library, the format is as follows: [identification of items, title of collection] Oxford College Archives, Oxford College Library, Emory University.
